I thought you should know-October 18, 2020

Here's the last installment of our ongoing homily series about faith in Jesus letting us live like most people don't and most people can't, but we can, by God's love overflowing.

Overflowing – Week 5 – You can have unlikely friends.

The reason why it is so darn easy to waste time on the internet is because the internet is like college. At college, or on the internet, someone shares your interest. Do you like making chainmail and dueling with foam swords? There's a group for that. Is one genre of music which is the best ever? You can go to a party where that's all they play. Whatever the conspiracy theory or hobby or cause that is your passion, there's a club to tell you that you are so right. The more obvious danger of youtube and college catering to every slice of life is that the fun there makes it easy to lose a lot of time. The more subtle danger is that you might live in a bubble where everyone is a lot like you. In the past few weeks during our Overflowing homily series here at Immaculate Heart of Mary, we've looked at specific ways faith in Jesus can let you live like most people don't and most people can't, but you can, because of God's love overflowing. Today the Gospel says that you can have unlikely friends.

In the Gospel, Jesus told a story about a king hosting a party, a wedding party for his son, and he makes his first guest list like a 21st century wedding planner: a carefully selected list of guest chosen to craft a curated experience and an unforgettable event. But when the plan goes sideways and invited guests refuse to come, the king gets mad and rips up his 21st century playbook. Instead, he tells his servants to do something crazy: "Go out into the main roads and invite to the feast whomever you find", with the result that the hall is filled with an unlikely hodgepodge of people who have little in common, but who are having a grand time together, "the bad and the good alike".

Jesus told this story to make a point about God, and heaven, and God's family. God's family is like your family: filled with people you did not get to pick, including a lot of strange characters. Walking the path to heaven means finding among our traveling companions some unlikely friends. It's not just that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit love sinners--that would already be great news. That is good news; God really does love sinners, and that's great news, at least it is if you are like me and so often fail to live by the values to which you aspire. But it's not just that Jesus, the Son of God, who reveals the Father and gives us the Holy Spirit, loves sinners; he also likes them. This is one of those crazy things that we know because it's what people saw when God chose to live like us and walk around us on earth: he liked sinners. Jesus liked talking with them, he liked eating with them, he liked relaxing with them, and he liked feasting with them--and, yes sometimes they drove him nuts--but he liked them. And people who were nothing like Jesus liked Jesus.

Brothers and sisters, shouldn't disciples be like the teacher? So you and I should aspire to be like Jesus. We should aspire to be joyful, humble, courageous, wise, good humored, friendly, considerate, attentive, genuinely interested, the sort of people who like people and who are liked by people who are nothing like them. The good news is that "having unlikely friends" isn't just something that we should like to do or we would like to do; with faith in Jesus, having unlikely friends is something we really can do!

Let me tell you two facts about friendship. First, a friendship's foundation is a common interest, a goal in common. Second, a friendship grows by time.

Faith helps with the first fact. By faith, even with people who are nothing like you, there is always something to talk about. Let me explain how this works. Say there is a person over here who is nothing like you; because that person is a human being, they are intensely interested in themselves; it's human nature. And because you are a Christian, you are intensely interested in them, too. See, you have have a common interest--them! :) Ok, I'm joking but only a little. I mean, faith pushes us to take seriously Jesus' words, "Love your neighbor as yourself"; and so be interested in what's interesting to others. St. Paul told us this last week: "Whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is gracious, if there is any excellence, and if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things. ... then the God of peace will be with you." Faith pushes you to care about and pay attention to other people's perspective, their good, and their interests, and so also for unlikely people, faith gives you a foundation for friendship.

Faith helps you with the second fact, too, the fact that a friendship grows by time. Take any friendship--you want it to grow? Give it time. You want it to fade? Cut time off. Now the big problems with taking time to make a friend or be a friend is that you are so busy you got no margin in your life. But faith in Jesus gives you that margin, because faith tells you Jesus is guiding you through your day, so you have time to pause and be friendly with someone you don't know. Faith in Jesus tells you that God knows you and is abundant to bless you. So when you feel like there's no margin your life, in the long term, faith helps you check your priorities to see if something has gotten out of whack. And faith helps you in the short term, too because it gives you some freedom from that relentless pressure that builds up inside when you feel like you have no margin your life, the pressure that tells you, "You have to get something that feels good in your heart, you have to get something entertaining in your mind, you have to get something in your pocket, you have to get something good in your life to escape this pressure", and so pushes you to be selfish. By faith, right in that moment when you feel that pressure, you can have the freedom and courage to take time for that first step to grow an unlikely friendship. You can say what St. Paul said: "I can do all things in him who strengthens me." So I invite you this week: strike up a conversation with someone whom you normally wouldn't.

Can you imagine what it would be like to have a heart that genuinely liked people who were nothing like you? By faith in Jesus, you can have a heart like that. You can have unlikely friends, by God's love overflowing.

Saint of the Week

Saint Hilarion

Saint of the Day for October 21

Saint Hilarion's Story

Despite his best efforts to live in prayer and solitude, today's saint found it difficult to achieve his deepest desire. People were naturally drawn to Hilarion as a source of spiritual wisdom and peace. He had reached such fame by the time of his death that his body had to be secretly removed so that a shrine would not be built in his honor. Instead, he was buried in his home village.

Saint Hilarion the Great, as he is sometimes called, was born in Palestine. After his conversion to Christianity, he spent some time with Saint Anthony of Egypt, another holy man drawn to solitude. Hilarion lived a life of hardship and simplicity in the desert, where he also experienced spiritual dryness that included temptations to despair. At the same time, miracles were attributed to him.

As his fame grew, a small group of disciples wanted to follow Hilarion. He began a series of journeys to find a place where he could live away from the world. He finally settled on Cyprus, where he died in 371 at about age 80.

Hilarion is celebrated as the founder of monasticism in Palestine. Much of his fame flows from the biography of him written by Saint Jerome.

Reflection

We can learn the value of solitude from Saint Hilarion. Unlike loneliness, solitude is a positive condition in which we are alone with God. In today's busy and noisy world, we could all use a little solitude.

Dynamic Catholic, Alive! – One God

The readings today are quite easy to understand. God speaks to His people, telling them that He alone is the Lord of all. There is but one God. Do we worship God alone and render unto Him all the praise, honor, and glory that are due to Him? Or do we place our trust in false gods that never satisfy us? Take a moment to reflect on any false gods that you need to eliminate from your life. As Jesus teaches in the Gospel, we certainly must live in this world as human beings but we must not yield to the evils of the world or turn away from the one and only God who is worthy of all of our worship.
